Radis is a leading provider of support services to elderly and disabled people living in their own homes. We provide personal and practical care to vulnerable people so that they can maintain their independence and dignity. Here are some examples of the support we provide:

Mrs M is 83 years old and has rheumatoid arthritis, particularly in her hands and knees, she finds this very painful. Every morning Mrs M knows that her Care Worker will arrive at 7.30am to help her out of bed, assist with her personal care needs, help her to dress and prepare her breakfast. Mrs M also has a call in the evening and enjoys a chat with her Care Workers while she makes her a hot drink and assists her to get changed and back to bed for a restful nights sleep.

Miss S is 29 years old and has been learning to live with the effects of Multiple Sclerosis. She now has to use a wheelchair at all times as she can only stand momentarily while transferring, due to the decline in her balance and mobility. Miss S lives on her own in a specially adapted flat where she maintains as much independence as possible. Two Care Workers who work alongside each other visit Miss S twice a day to assist with personal care, transferring, meals, toileting, dressing and household tasks that Miss S can no longer manage to do.

Mr D lives at home with his family. He is 19 years old and has been diagnosed with being on the Autistic spectrum disorder. He finds it hard to make new friends easily and can get agitated at times. His Support Worker goes to see him twice a week. On Monday Mr D is supported at work to help him understand what he needs to do and to develop relationships with work colleagues. On a Wednesday he is supported to attend an evening club where Mr D can meet other people and play pool. Mr D’s Support Worker enables him to be more independent in the community and will sometimes speak up for him if Mr D needs more help. Mr D has built up a good relationship with his Support Worker and feels confident to try new ideas out when his Support Worker is there.

Ms C is 42 years old and has suffered from mental health problems following an accident at home. She suffers from memory problems and gets quite anxious and depressed at times. Ms C’s Care Worker visits her three times a day to support with medication, preparing of meals and other domestic tasks. Ms C also has assistance from her Care Worker when needing support in making decisions that affect her life and well being. Once a week a Care Worker assists Ms C with a shopping trip to the local supermarket and they also enjoy a coffee and a chat at Ms C’s favourite coffee shop.

Mr H is a bright and cheerful 80 year old gentlemen who lives on his own at home. Mr H has been diagnosed as being in the early stages of Alzheimers. He tends to get very confused when not in familiar surroundings but still enjoys getting out and mixing with other people, he particularly loves going to a day centre twice a week where he joins in with all the activities. Mr H has a Care Worker to escort him there and back which means he can still enjoy the feeling of being part of the community while also keeping his mind active.
